Corporate Training : Leadership and Motivation
for SIS Branch Managers at Bengaluru

On 24th June, we conducted one day Seminar/ Workshop on 'Leadership and Motivation' for the SIS Branch Managers at Bengaluru wherein they were having the review with Mr. Tapas Chaudhuri, CEO. It was a great experience for them and it was very heartening to see that all the participants after the workshop showed great enthusiasm and transformation.

Feedback we received from Mr Sanjeev Rao, RVP, Bengaluru who himself participated in the workshop:

" We enjoyed the seminar/workshop and it was a great experience to Participate. We were all charged up and would also like to participate in more such sessions."

The aim of this workshop was to develop leadership skills, build team spirit and motivate to reach higher goals in life for the business leaders of the SIS at branch level.

The impact of climate change can be understood by the one fact that the USA and Europe is sizzling with 40 degrees. Gone are the days when Europe used to be most sought after destination in summers for tourists from all over the globe. Actually, we have very little time to save the planet which is the only home for all of us. It is high time that the global community rises to the need of the hour to save this green planet, home of the homosapiens.

From Editor's Desk...

Dear Readers,

Greetings to you all!

This year we had a longish winter, so was the summer and that too one of severest amongst all the summers in the recorded history. Many of the cities (precisely 21 cities) in India are facing acute water shortages and approaching the 'Zero Day' faster than imagined. This year Chennai has been experiencing acute water shortage in its known history as most of the reservoirs have gone dry. Since the arrival of the monsoon, some of the parts of the country is facing floods, but rain deficit across the country is discernible. Moreover, rains are very short, intense and localised. Thus deluge, inundation and flooding in pockets appear to be new normal. These unusual spells of winter, summers or even rains are nothing but return gift of the nature. We are going to face more of these in the years to come as we the homosapiens have exploited the nature to the hilt and ravaged it beyond its capacity to bear. It is being said that we have only few years left to us before the climate reaches to its extreme and becomes irreversible. We have not done much progress from the Paris Agreement on 'Climate Change'. The impact of climate change can be understood by the one fact that the USA and Europe is sizzling with 40 degrees. Gone are the days when Europe used to be most sought after destination in summers for tourists from all over the globe. Actually, we have very little time to save the planet which is the only home for all of us. It is high time that the global community rises to the need of the hour to save this green planet, home of the homosapiens.

While we are battling with the heat and water shortages, we need to be prepared for conserving the water when it rains to the maximum. Nothing has been done to preserve this precious gift of the nature. The government of the day, which has been returned to the power with thumping majority is concerned about the future threats arising out of the global climate change and thus created a new ministry named “Ministry of Jalshakti (Water Power)”. This is a very good decision of the government and must be hailed for that. We also heard the Prime Minister himself sensitising the nation in his first address after taking his oath (2nd time) on 30 June 2019 and made an appeal to ‘Save Water’. To my mind we need to have another global movement to save the nature, to save ourselves by ensuring availability of potable water and clean air for our next generation. For survival of India, we need to save the ecosystem of the Himalayas in a big way as more than 60% of our population is dependent on the Himalayan waters and the glaciers are vanishing fast. If we don’t act now, it will be too late!

At the IISSM, last month had been very productive as we conducted three X-BIS (weekend course) and two CSP Courses at Bengaluru and New Delhi. More on this in the News Section of this edition.

With Best Wishes,

Thanks and Best Regards,

Col (Dr.) MP Sen
